COUNTY'S TEACHERS

Meet in Fifty-Eighth Annual Institute This Week

EXCELLENT INSTRUCTORS

And Evening Entertainers—Out of 339 Teachers 337 Are Present—Each Session Well Attended.

Dr. George Leslie Omwake, President of Ursinus College, opened the Fifty-Eighth Annual Teachers' Institute with Devotional Exercises. A hymn and prayer followed. Musical leader, Mr. S. G. Smith, Irwin, Pa., gave the sounding note for the musical part of the program. He introduced a masterly method of tuning up his teachers to spiritual effort, as it were, charming them. His first exercises were forcibly reminiscent of the quotation given in the printed program: "Teachers should remember that power works with ease; weakness frets continually." Mr. Smith began his work with ease. Dr. A. S. Mackenzie introduced the lectural functions. His subject was The Outcast Child. He pointed out the fallacy of believing all institutes similar and vouched for a session anew. The institute became very attentive.

The lecturer paid homage to the author of The Winter's Tale, rehearsing the beautiful story of the King, Queen and Princess and eulogized upon the mother in general.

The highest patriotism is not displayed by the noise of celebration, but by the saving of one little child, as illustrated by the shepherds and the saved princess. Life is short, pathetically short, too short for celebration alone. The helping hand, that helps when help is necessary, transposes the prose into the poetry of divine service. The gist of his message was doubtless included within the last sentence.

"The teacher without the book in hand," Mr. Smith added Mr. Mackenzie's forethought, "I vouch this institute must be individualistic." The musical feature was followed by Dr. George Leslie Omwake's discussion on The Vital Forces of the School.

There are two vital elements in the school, the purely material, that is, the equipment, and the children and the teacher. Children are alive, yet pedagogy is frequently regarded as a plastic art. This infers the child a mass of lifeless clay. We do not mould character, contrary to what is often told. With proper mental reservation, the figure may be admitted; without this the thought is all wrong. It has been said that men have been likened to cast iron, while children resemble wax. This is not true. When speaking of the choicest experiences and spiritual things, language is frail, weak and deficient. It is inadequate after all merely comes from our mundane experiences. It is almost impossible to define the child; but if it is alive, it will grow. The growth is the most interesting feature of life. In babyhood, it should be aware of its surroundings, and aided that all the elements that logically belong to the sector of the circle may be supplied. Every stage in its growth needs one who is interested in filling the sector of the given circle with all that will produce plump growth.

Illustrations were given of vacancies in the minds of children noticed only when they reach a higher stage. The adult frequently experiences a hollow cavity in his or her life that should have been filled with the expanded nucleus of music, or other much cherished talent.

Life and growth of a child is not sufficient, it should bear fruit. Little can be gotten out of life, if nothing is put into it. He illustrated by referring to the musical director not being able to get fruit from his work unless he had put force and preparation to his efforts. From those who do not prepare, expand or develop that which lies latent within them, the same shall be taken from him that which he hath. Teachers must bear fruit with their pupils if both would be alive.

Roll call revealed an attendance of 337 out of the 339 teachers of Bedford County.

Music. Mr. Smith made the exercise variable. Every minute provided a new interest. He noticed a reservedness among the teachers that approached a refusal to follow a leader in martial music. This was not a stubborn refusal; but a signal to those who could not wave, to take a course in relaxation of throat, mind, nerve and muscle simultaneously, at some cheering section during a university baseball game.

What's in a Name? Mr. Mackenzie. In all names there is history. He showed that we have no names of great authors that are ridiculous. He classified the names of many of the teachers present under those of English, Scotch, Welsh, Teutonic, German, Scandinavian, etc., etc., and showed how many of our modern names in use are modifications of the European meanings or else are new names given by the missionaries.

In China there is a pole upon which is carved the names of 6,000 students. There, the student produces the aristocracy of the Republic. Names of those who are learned are honored among the Chinamen. ### Music, Anywhere with Jesus.

Dr. Omwake—The Three Fields of Pedagogy. No profession can exist without a large amount of good professional literature. It is true of lawyers, physicians and Christian ministers, that more confidence is gained by those men providence has possessed a large library. The same is true of the teacher. It is entirely possible to assume a professional character as a teacher. There is sufficient literature at hand in this profession to line the walls of the study with shelves of valuable and helpful books.

In every new work purchased on the subject of pedagogy, the author reserves a page for the introduction of his line of thought. This preface should be observed before the body of the work is begun, that the author may be understood from the start on his line of thought. Seldom is this viewpoint of the author read, and a result is confusion of thought as the text or book is studied.

Education is the taking of a child from where he is to where he ought to be. This Mr. Omwake regarded as a satisfactory definition. Beneath the word is he discussed facts and science, which is classified knowledge. Biology is that branch of the sciences with which every child should be acquainted. It is divided into two parts, Botany and Zoology. The latter is the more interesting to most children because, it being the study of an animal, the study is that of the human being. The particular branch of Zoology with which we are most concerned is Physiology. Regardless of a prejudice upon this subject, it is immeasurably valuable. Everything depends upon the powers of the body. From it springs action. But after all, the soul of that body is still more important. The study of the organs and senses is the gateway to the study of the soul. Therefore, the importance of physiological study is apparent.

History is a science that gives us an insight into human life. Sociology, a branch of science, gives a cross sectional view of the man, while History gives a longitudinal or lengthwise view. These studies therefore go to help us see the development of man. Anthropology and Psychology were referred to as essential scientific studies for those who would be professional educators. Professional teachers can only be measured by the foregoing studies. These branches of science constitute the "isness" of education.

"What he ought to be," the second part of the definition of education brought out the relation to a superior being. Every race has always recognized some being higher than himself. This relation, the vertical relation, cannot be eliminated. It is ingrown, therefore it must be considered, and to consider it means a study of it which leads on to Philosophy. The particular branch of this science relating to God is Theology. A second relationship, a linear view that joins man and man suggests the study of Ethics, another branch of Philosophy, the horizontal view, in contrast to the vertical view given in Theology. Encouragement to secure a good book in each one of these sciences, and placing it upon the library shelf for occasional reading, frequent reading, was given. It is not necessary to be forever reading these books. A bit of study of these guiding studies will develop, finally, a pedagogy that is each teacher's own. The idea is to start right, to start along the way with an assurance of right guiding us. Thus each one is led on to see right and that alone.

Music. Mr. Smith made the exercise variable. Every minute provided a new interest. He noticed a reservedness among the teachers that approached a refusal to follow a leader in martial music. This was not a stubborn refusal; but a signal to those who could not wave, to take a course in relaxation of throat, mind, nerve and muscle simultaneously, at some cheering section during a university baseball game.

A Happy Boy

"My little son John is as proud as a boy with a new pair of red-top boots with copper toes." That was the remark of George Bollinger after his youngest son, John Henry Bollinger, had been presented with a good watch by J. Floyd Murdock, Bedford's enterprising jeweler. Last Saturday, in the window of Mr. Murdock's jewelry store, there was a South Bend watch frozen in a cake of ice, and keeping perfect time. A pair of solid gold cuff links was offered free to the lady or gentleman guessing the nearest number of hours the watch would run. There were more than 300 guesses, and all guesses were free. The watch ran 42 hours, five minutes and 27 seconds. John Bollinger's guess was 42 hours and five minutes. John is "nine going on ten," and he preferred a watch to a pair of solid gold cuff links, and he got it, with a chain and charm thrown in. He was "tickled to death," and left Mr. Murdock's store with a Taft smile on his bright face.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Communication From Correspondent
at National Capital

STANDARD OIL OFFICIALS

Are Protected from Having Warrants
Served on Them by Attorney General
Wickersham.

Washington, December 16.—United States Attorney General Wickersham has refused to allow warrants to be served on John D. Archbold and other officials of the Standard Oil Company, in the case in which the Magnolia Oil Company of Texas was indicted by a Federal grand jury in Texas for criminal violation of the Sherman law.

Once again, Mr. Wickersham is using the machinery of the great office of the Department of Justice to protect, instead of prosecute, the millionaire heads of illegal trusts.

A hundred instances could be cited where Wickersham has, by means of especially prepared opinions, orders and rules, given comfort to the great industrial trusts, private monopolies and special privileges. It was Wickersham, the Attorney General, who stopped important suits against the beef trust immediately upon taking office. It was Wickersham, the Attorney General, who rendered an opinion upholding Ballinger and viciously attacking Louis R. Glavis, who said it was legal for sugar trust interests to acquire by the exploitation process 55,000 acres of rich sugar lands of the Philippines when the organic law of the islands expressly declares that no corporation shall be allowed to acquire more than 2,500 acres. It was Wickersham, the Attorney General, who sanctioned the Taft administration railroad regulation bill, later exposed and altered, containing a joker legalizing the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific merger, recently held unlawful by the Supreme Court. It was Wickersham, the Attorney General, whose suit against the steel trust is one in equity instead of a criminal prosecution.

At the time of the appointment of Wickersham, it was said his selection by Mr. Taft was in recognition of the desires of the great industrial trusts of the country, who had contributed large sums to Mr. Taft's campaign fund, and who as a return favor desired that a "safe" man be placed in charge of the government prosecuting machinery.

Before his appointment as Attorney General, Mr. Wickersham was a trust lawyer. For years and years he had been receiving huge fees from corporations for interpreting the laws, not from the viewpoint of the welfare of the people, but from the viewpoint of the welfare of the trusts. Mr. Wickersham was a member of the law firm of Strong & Cadwalader. Congressman Henry T. Rainey described this firm on the floor of the House of Representatives as follows:

"The firm of Strong & Cadwalader is one of these important New York City legal firms to which great corporations appeal for aid when they propose to violate the laws of the land or when they have violated the laws of the land."

The firm of Strong & Cadwalader, at the time of Mr. Wickersham's appointment as Attorney General, represented, among other great corporations, the sugar trust, and one of the last things Mr. Wickersham did as a member of the firm of Strong & Cadwalader, was to draw down his portion of a sugar trust fee of some-

NO MORE DANDRUFF FALLING HAIR GRAY HAIR

Men and women—do you want a splendid head of luxuriant hair free from scalp itch and dandruff?

Do you want hair so bewitchingly radiant that it compels the admiration of all who see it?

Do you want a scalp as immaculately clean and bright as a newly minted coin?

If you do, get a 50 cent bottle of PARISIAN Sage today, at dealers everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every carton and bottle—Ask for PARISIAN Sage and see that you get it. F. W. Jordan, Jr., guarantees it. Adv.

thing like $25,000. And one of the first things Mr. Wickersham did as Attorney General, was to write, on June 27, 1909, to John S. Wise, U. S. District Attorney for the Southern District of New York, a letter revealing his strong interest in three sugar trust officials then in danger of the penitentiary. This remarkable letter, the authenticity of which has never been denied by the Attorney General, reads in part as follows:

"My dear Wise:—
"Senator Root has sent me the proof of a petition signed by Bowers, Milburn and Guthrie, in support of their contention that the statute of limitations has run in favor of Messrs. Parsons, Kissel and Harned. If the only overt acts done to carry out the objects of the unlawful conspiracy were those referred to in the brief, I should think they were insufficient to save the bar of the statute. A strong effort will be made tomorrow to persuade the President to interfere in some way to prevent the indictments."

"Faithfully yours,
"Geo. W. Wickersham."

And now Mr. Wickersham is using his office as Attorney General to save from arrest John D. Archbold, H. C. Folger, Jr., and W. C. Teagle, officers of the Standard Oil Company. Under the Taft administration it has been impossible for the government to control the trusts, because the trusts controlled the government.

At last it has been possible to elect a President without the financial support of the heads of illegal tariff trusts, and it is hoped President Wilson will be able to find a man for Attorney General who will be so constructed temperamentally as to feel that millionaire sugar trust barons who rob the government and violate the law ought to be sent to the penitentiary just like a poor man is sent to the penitentiary when he violates the law.

THE SECRET TERROR

The haunting fear of sickness and helplessness is the secret terror of the working man. Health is his capital. Kidney diseases sap a man's strength and vitality. They lessen his earning capacity. ## CATTLEMEN'S ASSOCIATION

Held its First Meeting in Harrisburg on December 4 and Organized.

The Pennsylvania State Cattle-men's Association held its first meeting at Harrisburg on the 4th day of December, 1912, and organized permanently by electing officers as above stated. H. S. Bomberger, solicitor and representative of the Association, was authorized to solicit and collect funds for the support of this movement. The office of Secretary has been left open to enable the Committee on Organization to employ a capable man to be placed in charge of the Association proposed, with permanent headquarters at Harrisburg, Pa. The Solicitor and Treasurer is properly bonded. The Legislative Committee, as above named, held its first meeting at the Commonwealth Hotel, Harrisburg, on Saturday, December 7, 1912, and decided to prepare and recommend certain proposed legislation providing a remedy and correcting the inequality and weakness in the present law, as follows:

1. Civil service in the offices of the Live Stock Sanitary Board at Harrisburg to insure greater efficiency in this Department, its removal from partisan political influence and impartiality in the enforcement and administration of the laws.

2. Authority to kill condemned cattle and hogs.

3. Cattle with generalized tuberculosis to be paid for on a basis of fifty per cent. of the appraised value.

4. Cattle with localized tuberculosis to be paid for on a basis of eighty per cent. of the appraised value.

5. Cattle condemned and slaughtered and found healthy to be paid in full.

6. If the owner is dissatisfied with the State's inspection he shall be allowed to select a veterinary for the purpose of making an examination and inspection in the presence of the State Veterinary or its representative.

7. Compensation for certain diseased cattle when found in possession of abattoirs and slaughtered to be proportioned as follows: Sixty per cent. to be paid by the State, twenty per cent. to be borne by the slaughterer and the balance or twenty per cent. to be borne by the owner, without any qualifications to the time of ownership.

8. All cattle to be sold under tag system so as to make tracing of ownership possible.

9. All cows and heifers coming into the State to be inspected on admission unless the consignee gives bond that such cattle shall not be used for any other purpose than that specified in the consignment. The object of this law is to prevent beef cattle from entering into dairy herds.

10. An Act to encourage farmers and owners of dairy herds to build modern barns with plenty of light, ventilation and sanitary appliances.

11. The maximum price for a diseased hog to be twenty-five dollars in the hands of the slaughterer.

12. Where hogs are condemned on the owner's premises, the owner to be paid fifty per cent. of the appraised value.

13. Settlements by the State to be made within TEN DAYS whenever possible, and in no case more than thirty days from the receipt of veterinary's report.

14. To provide in certain cases the appointment of local veterinaries to make the inspection and fixing their fees at a maximum price of $1.00 for each inspection.

15. A proposed Act of Assembly for the enforcement of the above legislation providing the imposition of penalties, fines and imprisonment for any violations of the proposed laws.

The Committee invites and will appreciate suggestions and criticisms of the proposed laws from all parties interested in this cause. Your hearty co-operation is desired, to the end that justice may be done to the farmer, dairyman, drover and butcher and the public protected against the sale and consumption of infected meat and milk.

Hair Falling?

You certainly cannot lose your hair and keep it, too. Which shall it be? Lose? Then do nothing. Keep? Then use Ayer's Hair Vigor. That is about all there is to it. Ayer's Hair Vigor is also a splendid hair-dressing and hair- tonic. It keeps the hair soft and smooth and greatly promotes its growth. It does not color the hair. Consult your doctor freely. Doctors are studying these hair questions much more than in former days.

PARCELS POST

Its Advantages and Disadvantages to be Discussed by County Carriers.

Cessna, Pa., December 16, 1912. Editor Bedford Gazette:

Nearly all the great daily newspapers and all of the agricultural magazines are explaining to the people (and are calling the people who live on R. F. D. routes especially) the advantages to be derived from the Parcels Post law that goes into effect January 1, 1913, 6:30 a. m.

Now there are others besides the patron of a rural route interested in this business, and very much, too. Let us suppose a case or two: James Claar, a regular reader and believer of the Bedford Gazette, reads the chicken advertisements and decides to improve his chickens; he sends Brother Devore an order for three dozen day-old chicks. Jim lives a mile or more from the mail route. Now Brother Devore sends Jim his chicks and the weather is bad, snowing, raining, sleeting and blowing; not weather fit for anything to be out but mail men and dogs. Now, here comes the rural postman, loaded with bundles every day, and Jim is not there to receive his chicks and they won't go in his mail-box. What will the poor carrier do with them? If he puts them out in the storm they will all die.

Here is another one: Suppose Samuel Diehl wanted to send the editor five pounds of butter on the first of July and the thermometer was up to 95 in the shade, how Will Brother Devore keep that butter from greasing his automobile all over? Who will furnish the ice to keep this butter while in transit?

Now, Mr. Editor, I expect to have instructions on these and other questions that may arise over this law, when we have our meeting of the Bedford County R. L. C. A. in Bedford, January 1, 1913, and I believe it would be a good thing for all carriers and substitutes and other interested persons to attend the meeting. Will give exact place of meeting next week. Respectfully yours,
Wilson Hisson,
Pres. Bedford Co. R. L. C. A.

BETTER FARM EGG METHODS NEEDED.

What a jolly stunt for town boys to hunt the eggs in the hayrack, the barn entry and the haymow, and what a shout when that big bunch is found in the nest under the hay! That haymow egg has gained an international reputation.

A rot and spot authority declares that haymow nest responsible for $25,000,000 loss in eggs, while another declares the farmer's careless methods with eggs result in a total loss of $75,000,000 per year.

Of course most of these statistics come from the cold storage people, who must blame somebody else to bolster up their rotten side of the egg case.

The fact remains that better nesting and handling methods on some farms would save much loss in the quality and quantity of eggs. Our picture tells its story.

Old Fan has shoved some hay over the manger into the feed box in the entry, and black Biddy has appropriated it for a nest. Chances are that the busy farmer will hurry in at noon and throw egg and all over into the manger.

An egg thus laid in any old place is often lost or broken or often found when it is good for nothing but rank political roughhouse.

While a boy we found a half bushel of eggs under a hogpen, where heus had been laying and sitting since the first ages of man. We found a haymow nest containing 144 antediluvian eggs, and how often the hen stole into the wheatfield to be cut into chicken salad and scrambled with her eggs when the reaper went around! A hen loves to lay in one place. She will wait and wait to get on a certain nest, and if she drops her eggs just anywhere, it is because she got the habit from her careless owner. Thousands of eggs are lost, thousands are spoiled because of age, filth and heat, when a little forethought and outlay would prevent it.

Fowls should have a comfortable house with scratch floor, good nests, roosts, dropping board and a roomy grass yard where they may be confined when necessary.

The barn should be shut against the wasters. The stables should be screened against flies, and the flock should be kept away from the manure piles.

There are farms where hens pay but little because little attention is paid to the hens.

DON'TS.

Don't expect success without system. Make out a program of each day's work, and don't shirk nor jerk. Don't forget that a poultry show is a liberal education. It's a sample room of the poultry industry and certainly an emporium of cock alarm.

Valuable Gift

"Talking about Christmas-boxes," remarked a commercial traveler, "the one I got last year would be hard to beat. Our gov'nor never gave us a Christmas-box, so you can imagine how surprised we were when he told us all to go into his office, where he sat with a pile of envelopes in his hand."

"Gentlemen," said he, "I intend to give each of you a Christmas present this year. These envelopes contain something valuable, which I hope you will make good use of."

"Of course we thanked him and marched out, thinking that he was a good sort, after all. And what do you think was in the envelopes?"

"A check?"

"No; it was a confounded prescription for the cure of indigestion!"

Made it Work

A week before the Christmas holidays an undergraduate wished to start home, thus gaining a week's vacation on the other students. He had, however, used up all the absences from the lectures which are allowed, and any more without good excuse would have meant suspension. In a quandry he hit upon this solution; he telegraphed his father the following message:

"Shall I come home at my leisure or straight home?"

The answer he received was: "Come straight home."

An exhibition of the telegram to the professors was sufficient.

COUNTY'S TEACHERS

him of his fame, he changed his name to that of one more euphonious, and no stage or no man became more popular. It is impossible to estimate how much his new name won for him. There is doubt if Tennyson or Shakespeare would ever have been poets laureate had they owned different names.

Mr. Mackenzie was very interesting in his discussion. Many teachers would have been pleased to hear him develop his topic and carry it to a finish. Time did not permit.

The Curve of Progress—Mr. Harbold.

Physical experiment proves that children or more advanced students do not rise in progress along a straight line, as he illustrated by the upward inclined diagonal of a parallelogram. But very contrary to what all of us suppose, the line is irregularly lived and made of rising slides, curves and horns. However, the student, even though less skilled one day than another, if he continues in effort, will rise to higher heights at intervals, the termination of the diagonal of the parallelogram being the nearest stage of perfection.

No two pupils enter their courses of study with the same equipment. Those pupils cannot progress in parallel lines as they ascend the slope. Furthermore, the one will have reached a climax when the other is down low on the lowest level, and the reverse may be noticed from week to week. This swaying is seldom observed by those instructing, and it is readily noticed that such instructors, not being able to read the proper conditions, that professionally is true, the improper remedy is usually administered. Furthermore, a study of each new student is necessary, a careful observation of his or her ability should be made, that a basis of action may be planned for that pupil.

Mr. Harbold systematized the ages of children in the following manner: Chronological, Psychological, Physiological and the Pedagogical age.

Many children live in two of these ages at one time. They may be eight years of age chronologically; but four psychologically. They may be able to do only the intelligent work of the age of one of four years of age. A pupil may be ten years of age chronologically; but in his school work he belongs to a grade of children but six years of age, and thus, psychologically, he is but six years of age. Another may be three chronologically, but eight psychologically. Herein lie the great variations of child study, guidance and development. These irregularities must be observed if a frictionless progress would be attained.

The Kindergarten is frequently regarded by patrons as a mere playhouse. Regardless of this criticism, between the ages of four and six, it is a splendid time saver. This fact known, no censure or criticism however severe should guide the teacher from her course of using kindergarten methods in their work of instruction. Not the "namby-pamby" kind of method; but scientifically worked out courses and plans of procedure.

The instructor reminded the teachers of the frequent misuse of the language of the German boy and girl. Gesture or incomplete and contracted phrases usually suffice as replies to simple questions. Nasalized exclamations which cannot be spelled because they are not words are not used intelligently. Here is a new recess or depression in the upward progress of that child's path bounded with straight lines and curves, that must have attention.

In closing the address well supplied with examples of what he had observed in his child study, Prof. Harbold suggested an emphatic thought—"It is our business to change the school. We cannot, as teachers, change the home." To be on the alert to avoid a pupil falling behind in its grades, was a fitting remark with which to close.

Tuesday Afternoon

The Dear Old Home, Don't Be in a Hurry to go Boys and Blue Bells of Scotland, three selections of music opened the afternoon session. Mr. Harbold brought to light a thought previously put in words in the foregoing paragraph. Instead of using the word baseball in that comment upon the musical exercises, Prof. Harbold used football, and paid tribute to Mr. Smith as the cheer leader of the boys in the cheering section not during the football game, but the county institute.

The instructor continued on his topic: The Beginnings of History. He ventured to state that those who do not love history, do not care for the story. First step in the history process is to have practice in telling the story. It is an art to tell a story well. After the story can be told that the child may enjoy listening to it, then comes the second stage—having the child repeat the same.

Instead of merely discussing the subject of Stories, attention was directed toward several most interesting books of stories of primitive life. Among those suggested as ideal were: The Age of the Cave-boy, by McIntyre; The Lake Dwellers, The Gift Dwellers; The American Indian, by Frederick Starr. These stories lay a foundation for history and form the third step in history study preparation.

The teacher often errs in reading the story. It should be told. Telling shows the interest of the teacher, and the parts told, in comparison with the parts read to the class from the page, will cling the longer to the memory. In the fourth stage the history of America is begun. Imagination was advanced as appreciably valuable in comparison with memory, that is, not every thought or line need be memorized; but rather so studied that the imagination is allowed to form a picture of the objects set before us in historical words.

After the aim to teach power of telling the historical story simply has materialized, we are ready for advanced history study. Then comes the fourth stage, when hard facts must be grouped around men and action already introduced to the pupil through the story. The moral aim now is to have those in our care aspire toward that which they admire. It is not necessary to pick out the "moral plum" from the pudding. The moral will take care of itself.

Music: Slumber Song.

Education in Ancient Israel—Dr. Omwake. Up until the date 586 B. C. that of the Fall of the Babylon Empire, Israel was known as Israel. Thereafter, these people took the name of Jews. When Abraham reached the land of Canaan, he erected a family altar, of tremendous significance toward the sacredness of the family. It is regarded as a risk to see the young folks go from home into the world away from the restraining influence of parents and friends. Many are the temptations that may draw such from their moral customs. Abraham did a most unusual act by erecting the altar, thus teaching his followers a valuable lesson. His followers were those who had left their former homes.

The people then knew of no schools, yet they received an education. They were given information, a sense of their rationality and its purpose of what to serve. Of great importance was the great feast held in Jerusalem lasting for one week. Here every family from the north country and south country, from Galilee, Judea and Samaria, was supposed to be represented. There, was a wonderful opportunity yearly, in the absence of railroads, telegraphs, etc., to discuss religion, grape raising, sheep herding manners and customs. Many new friends were made and cherished. Their return homeward after the feast took with it a renewal of life and action.

Dr. Omwake discussed the isolation of the modern home. Nothing should be allowed to detract from the sanctity of the home. If the show and outdoor evening and daily attractions are reaping from the home the ancient, cherished, fostered functions of the home, those recreations and attractions should be modified. American life today is being secularized. Many lessons can be gleaned from the mode of life of the ancient natives of Israel that will sustain what each of us should desire to see preserved in our home today.

Roll call.
Music, The Shoemaker and Let Your Light Shine.

Dr. Mackenzie began his address on Industrial Training with a remark of his keen appreciation of the patience of the audience he addressed. Dr. Mackenzie claimed to have seen a great part of the globe and therefore had a real right to measure the intelligence of his listeners. Doubtless he was conscientious in his tribute.

There are those who condemn the classics; but they are not learned in the classical languages, Latin and Greek. Seldom do classical students condemn the classics. Seldom do those who really understand Industrial Training condemn it.

Many object to this line of work because such training is given in Reformatories and the schools for the Negro. Every one needs to know to use a hammer, saw and chisel. Splendid idea to give a tool as a present for merit, if such should be the method of rewarding merit.

He suggested a method of initiation in this subject by allowing those who have given good attendance to visit smith shops of various kinds where the elements of Industrial Training can be incidentally received. The following committees made their report:

Tuesday Evening

Tuesday night allowed a larger audience to hear Lee Francis Lybarger on the subject, Land, Labor, Wealth. There is a difference of opinion regarding certain political features of the address. There were many views of wealth presented that were startling, even amazing to those who give this subject little concern.

Wednesday Forenoon

Music: Yes, I Hear the Angels Calling. To the older teachers of the county, who had previously been directed by the same musical instructor, this song may have been touching, especially, if they recalled the recitals of the daughters in whose memory the song was written.

Devotional Exercises, Rev. R. W. Illingworth, Presbyterian Church, Bedford. Rev. Illingworth, in a most pleasing, forceful and persuasive manner, presented a picture portraying the advantage of teachers over preachers.

Music: You May if You Will.

Dr. Mackenzie opened the lectural part of the program with a tribute to Mr. Smith and the orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Koontz. He then prolonged his comment to Mr. Davis, the artistic Bedford barber, who has a keen sense of the beautiful in nature.

A partial history of a famous picture, perhaps the most famous painting in America was narrated with a lithotype copy in hand. It is known as the Colona Raphael. It was painted 12 years after Columbus arrived in America, bought by the King of the Sicilies in 1802, was transferred to the Louvre, Prussia, England, Persia successively, and finally landed in America by purchase of Pierpont Morgan for one-half a million dollars. It is now in the Metropolitan Museum in New York City, where it awakens a sense of reverence of the sacred and beautiful to all lovers of the beautiful in art.

Mr. Mackenzie used the previous remarks as an introduction to his

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. subject, Teaching Agriculture. Robert Burns, the highland poet and dreamer, was regarded as a student of agriculture. He spoke upon the possibility of the apple industry as well as the potato field. The new suggestion of farmers' clubs, such as tomato clubs, etc., that offer inducements especially to the younger folks of the farm was simple and advantageous. He pointed out novel characteristics of the poultry business, and gave examples of practical experience. Even good English was proved as profitable in the poultry industry, showing that the fowls kindly treated, softly spoken to would do better than those agitated by the harsh speaking, rough handling, scolding projector of the poultry business. Teachers were encouraged to send to the U. S. Secretary of Agriculture for the following bulletins: No. 134, Tree Planting on School Grounds; No. 218, School Gardens; No. 185, Annual Flowering Plants; No. 195, Beautifying Home Grounds.

The State Board of Agriculture located at Harrisburg, the State Experiment Station, State College, also will be willing to send out whatever bulletins any teacher may desire. The same may be secured for the farmer patrons as well.

Once more the orator lauded America, and this particular state especially, as the land of opportunity. Get out of the rut was the message to the teachers, and help the farmer boys and girls get out the rut as well. The average number of school years per child, five and one-third years, is too small. School life should be a life time. The farm offers the opportunity.

Warnings were thrown out to the teachers to shun the city sharks who thrive upon the get-rich-quick schemes operated upon the weaklings all over the land. The teachers are aware of receiving much literature making wealth a shining star. Shun such literature.

The Kentucky gentleman honored one of his countrymen, Mr. Lloyd Miffin, the great sonnet writer, by reading one of his poems, as a closing phrase.

After a musical selection, Mr. Harbold opened a discussion on Methods in History. The outline for development was presented as follows:

1, Inductive; 2, Deductive; 3, Telling; 4, Development.

The inductive method is the going from the particulars to the general. The premise, "Heat expands metals" served to explain a simple experiment, that, performed before a class, illustrated the method. The Deductive method was explained clearly by the search for all plants that have square stems, and after observing that each plant was a mint, the premises produce the conclusion that all mints have square stems. Induction and deduction are the leading methods in use.

The Telling method, the most common, was touched upon briefly. Mr. Harbold postponed the discussion of the last method given in his outline. The institute resolved itself into an executive committee, preparatory to a framing of suitable resolutions to relieve the present congested condition of the evening sessions of the institute. Within recent years, the teachers of the county have been debarred of the freedom, ease and smoothness they deserved while in attendance at the annual institute. This crowded condition noticeably unsatisfactory in the evenings, has been perpetuated by natural causes, chief of which is the gradual increase of the enrollment or number of teachers in the county. In conjunction with this increase of space needed, the hall has not increased, but nevertheless the public has continued to give their patronage in equal measure with previous years. It is plain that as the tree increases in volume, the atmosphere must yield more space. The tree, as are the teachers, is planted and compelled to remain there. If the teachers need more room, that and theirs is the first consideration.

COUNTY TEACHERS

Sentiment had spread about over the teaching body for better accommodations. The building could not be made larger, hence some other recourse. It was planned to have the teachers offer three dollars as an enrollment fee, and thus enable themselves to help themselves, and remove the superintendent's dependency upon the public for financial support, as he was compelled to do.

In support of the new enrollment fee, Messrs. Brenner, Krichbaum, Brumbaugh, Erney, Dull and Guyer offered debate. Their arguments were clear and the teachers fell into sympathy with the movement. A motion was made by Mr. Garbrick to adopt the three dollar enrollment. A vote followed with a unanimous affirmative.

It is to be remembered, that the act did not exclude the patronage of the public. The directors, especially, have been provided for and seats for the public will still be open. The entire transaction was merely a reform upward for the universal benefit of the institute, directors and public.

HECKERMAN LETTER

The Cost of Living Steadily Climbing the Skyward Ladder.

The person who picks up a paper sees among the items printed therein something about the high cost of living, and it is so here in Bedford. Meats cost from 12 to 25 cents per pound, eggs 45 cents per dozen, while in Philadelphia they just now are 24 cents. I remember well when eggs at Christmas got up to 20 cents per dozen, we all cried fearing we would have to eat ginger cakes.

Oh! how well I remember long years ago when Aunt Lucinda Reed, I called her, would give me a ginger cake horse and how proud I was for the gift at Christmas, and how I lamented and mourned thinking that, if my health were spared, I would have to dress and undress myself at least 365 times before I would get another ginger cake horse. That seemed a long, long time, but 'tis not so now, for Christmas seems to come gliding along several times each 12 months.

But I am awa, from the high cost of living. By the way, I just read a good thing on that score, and with your permission I will give it to you:

"Mary had a little lamb,
With mint sauce on the side;
When Mary saw the bill for this
It shocked her so she cried.

Mary had a little veal,
A cutlet fit to broil;
Her father, to pay for that meal
All morning spent in toil.

Mary had a little steak,
A porterhouse quite small;
And when the bill came in she wept
'No dress for me this fall.'

don't, can't or won't raise these articles and they must be shipped from the east, and with the freight added to the cost, gives the storekeeper very little profit.

I could write you quite a letter on the high cost of living, by specifying the different items, the cost to the consumer now and what these same articles cost 30 years ago. ### ACT QUICKLY Delay Has Been Dangerous in Bedford.

Do the right thing at the right time.

Act quickly in time of danger. In time of kidney danger Doan's Kidney Pills are most effective. Plenty of evidence of their worth. Mrs. D. P. Bartholow, Water St., Hyndman, Pa., says: "It was several years ago that I used Doan's Kidney Pills but I have not forgotten what this remedy did for me. I was in poor health for some time and suffered greatly from pains in my back and sides. I had chills and was often dizzy. Reading a great deal about Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply and began their use. They brought me prompt relief and as I continued taking them, I steadily improved. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to many other people and I have never known of a case where they have failed to prove of benefit." (Statement given October 12, 1907.)

A Permanent Cure

Mrs. Bartholow was interviewed several years later and she said: "Doan's Kidney Pills effected a complete and permanent cure in my case and I have had no need of a kidney medicine during the past two years. I willingly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills, as I know that they are deserving of all the praise given them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

That is the nature of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the one remedy for women which contains no alcohol and no habit-forming drugs. Made from native medicinal forest roots. Dr. Pierce tells its every ingredient on the bottle wrapper. Prominent physicians and some of the best medical authorities endorse these ingredients as being the very best known remedies for ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women.

This is what Mrs. GENETTI E. COFFEY, of Longstreet, Ky., says: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you what your medicines have done for me. I was a great sufferer for six years from a trouble peculiar to women, but I am thankful to say, after taking four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I am not bothered with that dreadful disease any more. I feel like a new woman. When I first wrote you for advice I only weighed 115 pounds—now I weigh 135. 'I thank you very much for your kindness. You have been as a father to me in advising me what to do, so may God bless you in every effort you put forth for good. 'I hope this testimonial will be the means of some poor suffering woman seeking health.'"

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition, answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know.

WIDE PLAIN is in Saskatchewan. It was so named because it is so. It is wide. The town does not cover the entire plain. Far be it from me to convey such an impression, inasmuch as the plain extends east, west, north and south ostensibly as far as there is anything.

No doubt somewhere in the distance there are trees, and hills, or something to stop the plain from spreading any further. And some day it is the intention of the Greater Wide Plain association to have real trees growing in their thriving little city. But just at present they are so busy getting the town established that the trees must wait.

George Freeman was one of the most energetic young men in Wide Plain. He was one of the pioneers. He was almost the Oldest Inhabitant, although he was but twenty-five years of age. You see, George located in Wide Plain when it was practically nothing but width and plain. He foresaw a future for the town, and became its leading dealer in agricultural implements and groceries and hardware and so on. He became the leading dealer, because he was the only one.

In a few months Wide Plain had a population of 2,500. And so social life became a feature of existence there. Social life requires two factors. One of them is women. The other is men. You may have thought that one feature would be sociability and the other would be life, but that would be drawing it a bit fine.

Lucy Cleveland was the belle of Wide Plain. She was not the belle because she was the only young woman there, for there were others. Others—young and beautiful, but while some of the others were as young none of them were as beautiful as Lucy.

Consequently Lucy had suitors aplenty. In fact, she had eight suitors, that being the available unmarried portion of the population that she would consider. And she managed to give the eight the impression that she was not considering them very much.

George Freeman endeavored to induce her to consider him. George's policy in life was to get what he wanted by one of two methods. One was to go where it was and take possession, the other was to ask for it. Inasmuch as Lucy was not a building site nor a quarter section, he could not claim her by right of discovery. So he had asked her. And she had assured him that while she esteemed him highly she did not see her way to be his. George had not asked her if there was some one else to whom she had pledged her affection or plighted her troth. He did not care. He went on selling agricultural implements and striped overalls and brooms and nails and putty and canned goods and other groceries, whistling little melodies to himself and wondering how Lucy would want their house painted when they got married.

Every now and then he would propose again to Lucy. By every now and then I mean that he would propose, say, once a week. Some weeks he proposed twice. He saw that it pleased Lucy to be proposed to and George was a gentleman who believed in making himself agreeable to a young lady when he was fond of her. So it came along toward Christmas.

"We must have a Christmas tree for the children," Lucy said. Lucy was teacher in the Wide Plain Sunday School. Her pupils idolized her. George and the other seven suitors had tried to join her class, but she had insisted that they must attend the Bible class for older students, which was presided over by Mrs. Henry Gillup, a most capable married lady, who had brought one husband and six children to help up-bild Wide Plain.

The fact that Lucy had demanded a Christmas tree occasioned many smiles, especially from George's rivals. "A Christmas tree!" laughed William Skidmore. "There isn't a tree for a hundred miles in any direction."

"Let's get one shipped in by freight, then," suggested Luke Morton. "No time now," Wesley Perkins pointed out. "It's only two days to Christmas."

The seven rivals were not so particular about the tree. Each of them knew that Lucy would be disappointed a bit, but each of them felt that the gift he had selected for her would help to overcome her disappointment. For, in any event, there was to be a Christmas Eve party at the church.

On the evening of December 22 George called on Lucy. She was still unhappy because the dear children could not have a tree.

"Now, Lucy," he said, "I've arranged it all for you. There'll be a Christmas tree."

"Oh, have you got it? Where is it? I didn't know you could get one."

"It isn't here yet, but there'll be one Christmas eve. Now, don't ask questions. Mrs. Gillup and I will fix it up all right."

"But I must trim it up."

"No. Mrs. Gillup and I have arranged for it all. You are not to worry yourself about anything. Just you gather your class together and be at the church at 8 o'clock that evening, and the tree will be there."

So Lucy, scenting mystery, and too diplomatic to ask anything more, was compelled to content herself with that much information.

Towards dusk of the day before Christmas George was seen carrying several bulky bundles into the church. Mrs. Gillup had spent some time in conference with him that day. The seven rivals had attempted to quail her, but she would not gratify their curiosity further than to say that there would be a tree. They had asked her—separately—if she would hang their presents for Lucy on the tree and she had agreed to do so.

She and George, behind the drawn curtains of the church, labored long with curtain poles and string and a profusion of green paper, to say nothing of several bundles of artificial palms and the like, which George had unearthed among his stock.

When the audience was assembled for the Christmas eve exercises Mrs. Gillup slowly drew back a curtain which concealed one corner of the room, and there, with candles glowing and green paper and green palm branches rustling, stood a Christmas tree. It was not an evergreen tree.

"We Must Have a Christmas Tree."

It was not a genuine fir or cedar, but it looked like a tree. And the candles and the strings of popcorn and glittering ornaments hid many of its faults.

To the surprise of Lucy, George was not in sight. She looked all about for him, in her delight, wishing to thank him for his ingenious way of providing this make-believe tree for the little ones.

Mrs. Gillup went blithely on, taking presents from the tree and distributing them. After passing out the gifts for the children she picked off packages and bundles for the older folk.

It was noted that the tree sort of shook every time she took off one of the gifts which had been provided by the seven rivals for Lucy. But at last the final package had been disposed of. Mrs. Gillup drew the curtain in front of the tree again and the audience filed out, laughing and chatting over the success of the entertainment. Lucy did not hurry away with the rest. She stepped back of the curtain with Mrs. Gillup.

"It was just lovely, Mrs. Gillup!" she exclaimed. "But why wasn't Mr. Freeman here? After his hard work and cleverness in helping you, I should have thought he would have wanted to see how the tree looked."

"I expect he was pretty busy."

"And—of course, I haven't any right to expect such a thing—but he was such a good friend of mine, Mrs. Gillup—I really thought it a little odd that he didn't make me some kind of a present—just a remembrance, or—"

"I didn't forget you, Lucy," said the tree. "You can have me."

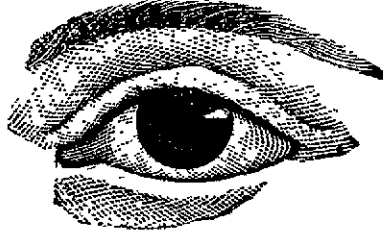

And Mrs. Gillup says that Lucy knew all about it all the time, because she had sharp eyes, and no tree that wore shoes could fool her.

A Costly Gift.

A Car For All The People

Mr Ford was the inventor of one of the first automobiles in existence.

He saw its splendid possibilities as a servant to humanity.

With a keen foresight that now seems almost like prophecy, he determined to make a car that would be—first, right in mechanical principle and practice, second, light, that it might be economical; third, simple in construction, that it might be easy and sure in operation, and fourth, low in price, that it might not be a thing of luxury, but of common necessity.

One car and one purpose have won for the Ford a success almost unprecedented in modern business.

New prices—Touring car, $600; Torpedo Runabout, $525, F. O. B. Detroit.
